

Occupying for Economic Justice in 1968

Martin Luther King's Poor People's Campaign

In 1968 Martin Luther King organized a 3,000-person tent city for economic justice, called the Poor People's Campaign or Resurrection City. How was this similar to and different from Occupy Wall Street and the smaller encampments around the country in 2011?

Join Occupy Hartford on Martin Luther King Day for a vegetarian potluck, short film about the Poor People's Campaign, and discussion of what this history tells us about the Occupy movement, its issues, and its tactics.

Monday, January 21, 5:30-8:00 p.m.

Kabbalah House

1023 Albany Avenue, Hartford